Description

This beautiful property is perched on a hill just outside of Santa Eulalia and offers excellent sea views. As soon as you drove through the gate, you lay in an oasis. The ride takes you past the Frida Guesthouse, named after the artist Frida Kahlo. The villa has a Mexican hacienda style that creates a perfect hideaway or retreat for your large family or guests. The large main house Diego, named after Frida's husband Diego Rivera, sits proudly on the hill and is beautifully integrated into the surrounding nature with olive, pine and palm trees. Due to the south-west orientation and floor-to-ceiling glass windows, light floods the living areas throughout the day.

Every part of the property was built with care - be it where the materials come from or whether the dimensions fit the geometry.

Multiple terraces surround the house to enjoy meals at any time of the day, be it a private breakfast before your guests get up, a long lunch with all your friends or an evening party by the stunning pool. Take your private footpath up the mountain to a yoga deck or hammock between your favorite trees, but the spirit of the estate comes to life when the music starts and the sun goes down.
